HOLD ANNUAL MEETING

Determination to fight intemperance and particularly Ontario's beer rooms was renewed at the annual meeting of the North York Temperance Federation in the Newmarket Christian-Congregational church on last Thursday afternoon.

Rev. Byron Snell, Aurora, was elected president to succeed J. M. Walton, Aurora, who declined re-nomination. Mrs. I. Morton, Belhaven, was elected vice-president, and Wm. J. McAllister, King, was elected secretary-treasurer.

Giving an inspiring address on "The Challenge of Youth in Temperance Effort," F. G. Magee, B.A., Toronto, stated that many young people resent the presence of any evidence of alcohol at parties. He cited one instance of a community where the young people had joined in a declaration of purpose that they would not attend or remain at any party where there was any evidence of alcohol.

One evening a young man came to one of their parties slightly under the influence of liquor. One of the leading young men of the group approached the proprietor and requested that the young man be asked to leave. This the proprietor refused to do, stating that the young man had paid his admission fee and therefore was entitled to remain.

When the leader reported to the group, a large number prepared to leave the hall. When asked by the proprietor the reason for their action, he was told of their declaration of purpose. The result was that the proprietor of the hall faithfully promised that such a situation would not occur again.

COUNCIL STILL NOT READY TO ACCEPT WELL

Resolution By Deputy-Reeve To Hold Conference Dropped

CITES MONEY SPENT

The town is in no hurry to take over the new Strigley St. well, it developed at a meeting of the town council on Monday evening.

Apparently the council is far from satisfied with the well and propose to let the contractors do the worrying as long as possible. "I think some members of the council will be surprised to know how much we have already spent on that well," said Deputy-Reeve Joseph Vale, moving for a conference with the contractors to find out what the well situation now is.

"In 1934 we paid to the International Water Supply Co., $1,260," Mr. Vale said. "We also paid to other people, on account of the well, $69.05. In 1935 we paid to the company $4,200 and to other sources $3,072.54. In 1936 we paid to the company $1,500 and to other sources $3,196.63. That is a total of $9,660 to the company, and $6,338.22 to other sources. That is a total of over $13,000."

"With interest the payments to the end of 1936 amount to $13,625," N. L. Mathews, clerk and treasurer, stated. "Of course, as far as interest is concerned, we are getting some water from the well."

"I was over at the well today and no work has been done for the last two months," said Mr. Vale.

"Of the total spent, $6,960 would be returned to us if the company should give up the well, but the $6,338 would not be recovered."

"I will tell you all about it," said Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd, opposing the resolution. "Our engineer, Mr. Redfern, is not anxious to settle. The longer the well is carried on by the company, the better we will be able to judge the well. Once we take it over we will have to service it. So we are not losing anything by waiting."

"If you want to force a settlement, all right," said Dr. Boyd. "That is what we have been trying to jockey away from."

"Is the water satisfactory? Is it likely to be satisfactory?" asked Councillor Arthur Evans.

"The well will never be scrapped," said Dr. Dales.

"Do we have to settle when they say so?" asked Mr. Evans.

"No," said Dr. Boyd.

"Do we have to accept the water when Mr. Redfern says it is satisfactory?" asked Mr. Evans.

"No, but if we accept part of the water we will have to pay in proportion to the amount contracted for," said Dr. Boyd.

"That's where the bickering will be."

"I feel that the International Water Supply Co. has treated us squarely," said Councillor Wm. Dixon.

"When the company found the water was bad, they didn't tell us," said Mr. Evans. "They went on and spent thousands of dollars."

Mr. Vale's resolution was dropped.

EXPLAINS NEW MILK TREATY

Producer Gets Benefit Of Price Increase, Clarke Declares

Producers are getting practically the entire benefit of the recent Toronto one-half cent a quart increase in the price of milk, E. H. Clarke, Aurora, of the Ontario Milk Producers' Association, told a meeting of 100 dairy farmers in Aurora on Monday evening.

Mr. Clarke outlined the following important provisions of the recent agreement covering the Toronto market with the Ontario Milk Control Board: Clause A, the base price for standard milk shall be $2.25 per hundred pounds of milk testing 3.4 per cent. butterfat, delivered to the plant. Clause C, a quota shall be set for each producer. Clause D, payment shall be made at the base price for all fluid sales and not less than 85 per cent. of the quota.

Clause E, the balance of the quota shall be paid for at the formula price based on the present Ontario manufacturing milk formula. Clause I, producers to any dairy in the Toronto market shall be paid by cheque or cash delivered personally on, or before the 14th day of the month following the purchase.

Holland Marsh Gardeners Get Association Charter

Will Meet Friday To Discuss Purchase Of Supplies

With the receipt of their charter last week, the much-planned-for association of celery and vegetable growers in the Holland Marsh took another step forward.

Seven permanent directors are named. They are Prof. W. H. Day, John Rupke, Gordon Davey, W. Valanteyne, F. L. Doane, C. Snee and J. C. Kaeman.

Officers appointed were: president, Prof. W. H. Day; vice-president, John Rupke. The secretary-treasurer was not definitely appointed, but F. L. Doane is acting in that capacity for the present.

Another meeting will be held in Bradford on Friday afternoon to take up the matter of the purchase of supplies, which includes seeds, fertilizers, crates, baskets, etc. Prices for these are being obtained this week and the information will be available for the Friday meeting.

There are at present 75 growers, representing 800 acres. It is expected that another 25 contracts will be signed in the next few months.

"Allowing five acres to a family," Prof. Day told The Era, "the marsh could support 1,600 families. A large family, how-

ARE TO MARK KIRK'S NIGHT

"Tom Kirk's night" at the local arena was to have been marked tonight. On account of the weather it will be held the first night next week that the ice permits.

Hundreds of shouting, pushing, falling, skating public and separate school youngsters will be on hand to show what they can do with a piece of ice and a pair of skates.

There will be a hockey game at 7 p.m. between the two leading teams in the school league. Half a dozen teams have been battling for supremacy and now the two best will show that Newmarket is a real hockey town.

After the hockey there will be ice races and sports, with prizes for the winners.

Any balance left over after paying for prizes will be used, as usual, to purchase playground equipment.

The late Tom Kirk, founder of kids' night, was a county police sergeant, stationed at Newmarket.

Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd will be present and will speak briefly on the life of the late Tom Kirk.

E. J. Davis Commends Safety Guard For Leather Workers

ALMOST FOOL-PROOF

E. J. Davis, Jr., returned on Friday from Toronto after attending a directors meeting of the Leather, Rubber and Tanners Safety Association.

A new safety device for the protection of workers at embossing presses was discussed, and E. J. Davis, chairman, announced that every known owner of such machines in Ontario would be contacted and advised of the association's endorsement of the new safeguard obtainable, which is practically fool-proof.

Connaught Research Laboratory, at Queen's Park, has advised the association that they stand ready to co-operate 24 hours a day, to supply serum, in the event of any cases of anthrax being reported.

The directors decided to hold their annual general meeting in Toronto on April 19, to coincide with the annual safety convention of the Industrial Accident Prevention associations.

U. MARSH DIES IN 84TH YEAR

Well-Known Resident Dies After Short Illness

One of Newmarket's oldest residents, Uriah Marsh, 83 Botsford St., died last Thursday afternoon. He was born on Jan. 21, 1852, 86 years ago, in Curry Mallet, Shropshire, England.

Mr. Marsh left England, "on his own," at the age of 16 and came to stay with his uncle, the late Mr. Culverwell of Lambrook farm, just outside of town. By his own efforts he came to occupy a prominent place in the community and to see his sons well on in life. He married Mary Elizabeth Sharpe, who survives him, on Nov. 26, 1880.

He farmed in this district until 1918, when he retired. His last farm was situated on the town line near the York County hospital. He was a member of the Anglican church and in politics was a staunch Conservative, although he never allowed a difference in political faith to come between him and his friends.

"Uriah Marsh was a man of his word," was the tribute of a man who knew him well. "If he said he would do a thing, you didn't need it in writing."

Mr. Marsh's death was the first break in the family for many years. He is survived by four daughters: Mrs. Morgan Gainer, San Diego, Calif.; Mrs. Ross Evans, Misses Edith and Leila Marsh, at home; and by four sons: Burton G., and Leslie W., of Netherhill, Sask.; Hugh U., of Francis, Sask.; and Alfred C., of Gorman St., Newmarket.

Patrons were three sons, Hugh, Leslie and Alfred Marsh; his son-in-law, Ross Evans; and Howard and Lawrence Cane. The service was held at 2:30 p.m., Saturday, with Rev. A. J. Patstone in charge. Interment was made at Newmarket cemetery.

Arrears Collections Pull Town Out Of Deeper Financial Hole

GEORGE VALE REPORTS

"Pleasant and unpleasant," according to N. L. Mathews, town clerk and treasurer, is the annual report of the auditor, George Vale, on the town's finances, presented to the town council on Monday evening by Mr. Mathews.

"The report shows a deficit of current liabilities over current assets of $1,684.81," Mr. Mathews said.

"There are reasons to account for that," Mr. Mathews said. "The water and light committee overspent its budget for electric light maintenance by $5,000, as a result of the work that has been done in co-operation with the Bell Telephone Co. Over $10,000 has been spent for electric light maintenance. Two men have been on the job all the time."

"The property committee, improving the town hall, overspent its budget by $500," Mr. Mathews continued.

"We were instructed to do so," said Deputy-Reeve Joseph Vale.

"On the other hand, we collected over $3,000 in tax penalties and a large amount in electric light arrears," Mr. Mathews said.

"Our net overdraft is $1,684, which is really very good," Mr. Mathews said.

"So the position is that we overspent our budget by $6,000, but have a deficit of only $1,684," queried Reeve Dr. L. W. Dales.

"According to the books of the high school board there was a balance of something over $800 a year ago coming to the town," Mr. Mathews said. "They have changed their accounting system, and their figures now indicate that we owed them $1,200 at the end of 1936."

"If we had that $1,200 to take care of, our overdraft would be $2,800, but the high school board will absorb that $1,200 at the end of the year," Mr. Mathews said.

"We can't go on this way overspending our budget," Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd said. "We will have to have a conference with the Bell Telephone Co. and see where we are going."

"We paid off $40,000 in debentures in 1935," Mr. Mathews continued. "We have about $223,000 in debentures left owing by the town, and about $80,000 owing by owners, paid as frontage tax."

"The auditor's report shows the water and light committee with a deficit of only $1,112."

"If the committee overspent its budget by $6,000, that shows the water and light department to be very profitable," remarked Deputy-Reeve Vale.

"Yes, we had a surplus last year," agreed Mr. Mathews.

Greenshirts Beat Rivals 6-2 In Second Playdown

Sutton Hits Stride On Own Ice, Trounces Cannington

Sutton advanced to the second round of the intermediate "B" play-offs by virtue of their 6-2 victory over the hard-checking Cannington crew at Beaverton on Monday night. They played before the largest crowd ever seen in the arena, there being well over 200 turned away.

The first game of the two-game series played at Sutton last Thursday ended in a 4-4 draw, but Sutton went into the game giving all they had, and while Cannington were not quite good enough, they showed their usual fighting spirit and looked particularly well in defeat.

Sutton opened the scoring on a smart effort by Burchell, but Cannington put on a strong offensive and tied up the score shortly afterwards. Both teams played cautiously and waited for the needed openings. The checking was close and though both teams missed several chances there was no further scoring during the opening period, which ended 1-1.

As the second canto began, Sutton put on a strong offensive type of play which disorganized the Cannington team to some extent, and netted the Sutton crew three well-earned goals by Milroy, Burchell, and Carpenter to make the count read 4-1.

Although the Greenshirts were handed two penalties during the period the back-checking by Milroy and the stick-handling of Jack Culverwell proved equal to the occasion, as the period ended with no further scoring.

Help With Intermediates Promised For Next Year

Andrew And E. J. Davis Play Hosts To Hockey Team And Friends

Promise of help in building up an intermediate O. H. A. hockey team another year was given by Andrew Davis and E. J. Davis, executives of the Davis Leather Co., at a party which they gave in Toronto on Monday evening in honor of this year's team.

They expressed the opinion that Newmarket had a better chance in intermediate hockey, where they were not up against artificial ice teams. In junior hockey this was not so.

The party began with a dinner in the Prince George hotel, the dining-room magnificently decorated in red and white, the team's colors. Both Andrew Davis and E. J. Davis congratulated the team on their showing this year and paid tribute to the manager, Stan Smith.

Aubrey Marshall, president, A. C. West, secretary-treasurer, and Stan Smith, manager, replied on behalf of the hockey executive and the team.

Following the dinner, the entire party of 44 persons enjoyed Maple Leaf Gardens box seats at a mercantile game as guests of Messrs. Davis.

Guests included the hockey squad: Bob Peters, Mickey Smith, Bernie Hodgets, Bill Roberts, Joe Peat, Sonny Townsley, Doug

Dirty But Lovely Is China, Missionary Tells Cherokees

Mrs. W. H. Eves Introduces Speaker And Mrs. Max Smith Presides

By Bea Westcott

"It takes two weeks to prepare cereal for the table, so you have to plan a long way in advance when you keep house in our part of China," Mrs. W. E. Sibley told members of the Cherokee club and their guests at the annual banquet held on Friday in the basement of St. Andrew's church.

The tables were very attractive, decorated with the club colors of green and yellow. Dainty favors were combined in the scheme and were particularly effective when the candles were lit. Forty-nine sat down to supper.

Mrs. Sibley, who was introduced by Mrs. W. H. Eves as "the girl who came over and played the wedding march when we were married," was formerly Miss Vida Coatsworth and taught music at the Toronto Conservatory of Music. For the last eight years she has made her home in China, where her husband is a missionary. While there she taught music to the Chinese.

May Get Help From High School Board For Budget

Says Prompter Payments May Enable Board To Cut Surplus

The high school board may help out the town this year by allowing the town a mill of the accumulated surplus of the high school board, P. W. Pearson, chairman of the finance committee of the board, told The Era this week.

"This surplus, which has appeared in the town auditor's report every year, was $8,000 odd at the end of 1935, and has been practically the same ever since," Mr. Pearson said. "This surplus enables the high school board to pay the costs of the high school for the first three months of the year without borrowing."

"By that time we receive money from the county, which carries us through the rest of the year, and leaves the surplus on hand at the end of the year again. The town's share of the cost in the past has been meeting the high school debentures. As the debentures are being paid off, the town's share of the high school costs exceeds the amount of the debentures, and the town has to pay us the balance."

"I consider it a matter of sound finance for the high school board to carry a surplus. If we didn't have this surplus in January, we would have to ask the town to advance about $3,000 per month until we got the county grant, and the ratepayers would have to pay interest on the money advanced."

"The county now has adopted the policy of paying the high schools a certain proportion of the grant each month. It is there-

CROSS OF FIRE LIT AT SCHOOL

Totem of "Klan" Lights Local Landscape At Midnight

Slumberers were startled out of their rest on Friday night by the appearance of a fiery cross. Affixed to the bird-bath on the circle in front of Pickering college, the flaming object burnt brilliantly for some time. Erected on a prominent spot, it could be seen blazing from some distance, and many hurried to view it.

Weird and ghostly though it appeared to spectators, further investigation proved it to be quite real. The cross was constructed of a sapling of about 15 feet, a cross arm, wrapped in sacking and soaked with gasoline or some such inflammable substance, which made altogether an admirable torch.

Witnesses described the sight as eerie and awe-inspiring. As the wild flames danced about in the cool night breeze they cast creepy shadows and created an atmosphere of intense unreality.

EDUCATION WEEK

The purpose of education week, just over, is to educate adults, not children. The idea is to educate adults concerning the education of children. The ideas and aims of the Canadian Teachers' Federation, put forward in last week's Era by Principal J. B. Bastedo, are worthy of careful consideration. Some of the ideas call for radical changes in the school set-up.

Helping Poor Student

The teachers take a long-sighted view of education as something more than reading, writing and arithmetic. Nor do they seem to think of it primarily as a means of making their own living. The teachers seem to regard education as a training in citizenship, in living a happy and useful life, and as a way to an ever better civilization. The teachers think that there should be greater equality of opportunity in education. They would have family means minimized as an element in determining whether or not a student gets a chance. The costs of education should be more widely distributed according to ability to bear taxation, and the "poor but clever student" should be assisted to go on with his studies.

Teachers' Salaries

Some thought is given to the small rural school. The teachers seem to suggest that this school should be eliminated, and the children transported to larger schools where greater advantages would be available. The request for minimum salary schedules, if granted, might make the cost of maintaining some one-room country schools prohibitive and force amalgamation. There is no one, however, who will disagree with the desirability of paying more to teachers who are now receiving $500, $600 or $700 a year. A business man could say that it is foolish to pay teachers more than it is possible to employ them for, and there are plenty of teachers who are glad to accept any salary, however low. But the paying of these low salaries keeps away from the profession people who find that they can earn a more satisfactory living in other lines of endeavor. Higher salaries will hold in the profession and attract to the profession better qualified teachers.

Farm Salaries

It is pointed out by the Rural Co-operator, a new farm paper, that while country teachers are in some instances receiving only $500 a year, there are entire farm families living on little more than that. The teachers' suggestion that school costs should be shared by dominion and provincial (to a greater extent) governments is therefore a sound one.

WHY SHOPPERS LEAVE TOWN

Two factors, the clash of competition and conflicting interests, and hesitation on the part of local business leaders to assume new burdens, stand in the way of the organization of a much-needed merchants' association in Newmarket. Outweighing these stumbling-blocks greatly are the advantages which would accrue to the shopping public and to the merchants themselves. Organization would enable the merchants, particularly at a normally dull time of the year such as January and February, to put on combined bargain sales to attract people to the stores in sufficient numbers to give merchants a fair return. Organization would permit the merchants to check up on what articles are not carried in town but should be carried to prevent people going away to other centres. Merchants could divide up the task of carrying unprofitable and infrequently required articles which lead people to go out of town and while there buy other articles which they could obtain locally.

They Might Do This

Merchants might in some instances go even so far as to divide up in some instances the carrying of profitable lines in order to give the public a greater range of choice. Newmarket merchants could organize themselves into a great department store, each store a department specializing in particular lines. There would be a number of duplicate or triplicate departments, or stores in the same lines, of course, and that would make Newmarket a more interesting place to shop. There would not be so many weak spots, however, lines in which there is little choice or which cannot be obtained at all in the Newmarket shopping centre. When a woman goes to the city to buy a size or shade or brand she cannot purchase here, she buys enough other articles which she could have obtained here to make her trip, in her opinion, worth-while.

The Local Theatre

For the same reason a good local theatre is one of the greatest assets which Newmarket merchants have. Local merchants would reap dividends if they made an organized effort to promote our own local theatre. Increased patronage means ever better pictures and bigger shopping crowds. "Are you going to see Such-And-Such-A-Picture at the Palace on Saturday, Mrs. Brown?" Mr. Merchant, who would keep himself posted on the theatre's "coming events," might say, "I was going to the city on Saturday, but I wouldn't want to miss that picture—perhaps we don't need to go to the city," might be the reply. There is at least a thought there. Small town business can more than hold its own if it pulls together.

THAT SELF-IMPOSED SILENCE

A great deal is being said now about the failure of the British press to inform the public about the events leading up to the abdication of King Edward VIII. A British M.P. writing in a Canadian magazine calls this failure the greatest blunder the British press has ever made. He thinks that keeping the public informed would have averted the crisis and that Edward would still be king. He may be right.

Unwelcome Publicity

The New York Times tells us of a new development in the old country. Not very long ago a picture appeared in at least one Toronto newspaper showing the Duke of Kent taking a woman friend to a phrenologist's. Most of us saw this picture and thought little or nothing of it. Publication of the picture in the British press apparently started a campaign among certain British M.P.'s to censor the British press. The New York Times says: "A veiled threat of censorship accompanied the parliamentary campaign which followed the alleged 'pillorying' of the Duke of Kent, who was photographed while taking a woman friend to a phrenologist's while the duchess was convalescent after the birth of their last baby."

Yellow Journalism

We have not seen any other comments about the wisdom of publishing this picture, but the outcome has been a memorandum sent to the British government by the Newspaper Proprietors' Association, referring to the spread of "yellow journalism." The newspaper proprietors make no reference to the Duke of Kent incident but "strongly condemn methods of newsgathering which may cause unnecessary distress to private persons."

Authorities Blamed

The newspaper proprietors say that reporters are often compelled to annoy private persons unnecessarily, particularly in cases of suicide, because government and police officers have failed to give out reasonable information. The newspaper proprietors say they hope "it will be appreciated that freedom in collection and publication of news is just as important to a free press as freedom in expression of views and that all possible facilities will be granted to newspapers to maintain properly and efficiently their services of information."

The Common Round

By Isabel Inglis Colville

"Fashions"

I have a sovereign remedy for a "medium" attack of "blues"—and I'm almost certain you would never guess it. Well, being partly converted by my friend Leonard Hannam to a moderate amount of co-operation, I'll tell you the secret.

I sit me down in front of a cosy fire in winter or in the shade of a "spreading chestnut tree" in summer, and around me I gather fashion magazines and magazines which devote a few pages to fashions, and by the time I've gazed at a variety of these weird works of art (?) my spirits begin to rise and the faint blue haze which is clouding my mental horizon begins to "fold its tents like the Arabs, and as silently steal away."

I open a book at random and gaze, hypnotized, at a head surmounted by what looks like a cartwheel covered with chiffon, surmounting a figure which looks as if it had attained its present proportions by a well-thought-out diet of orange juice and lettuce with, maybe, a cup of clear coffee as an after-thought. I try to imagine the effect of the cartwheel, topping my five feet of ordinary womanhood.

Just as I am about to turn the page, my eye is caught by what for a moment I thought to be an angel-cake pan. But no—it's a hat! Had it been of tin, I could just imagine one of the toothsome, party-appearing, snow-white confections my Aunt Mary Jane used to make come tumbling out of it. Were it given to me as a gift, it would make an elegant flower basket. Brimming with marigolds of every variety, it would adorn any table.

Just as I was concluding that this summer I'd save money and go bare-headed, I found a small turban-like affair, which bore quite a resemblance to a normal head-covering. It wasn't smashed over one eye as if it had violently collided with a door. Nor was it pushed back until you felt you must never let go of it.

So I picked up my fleeting courage, and decided that there were more hats in fashion's philosophy than I had dreamed of. Of course, to be perfectly honest, the past cannot boast that its fashions were always sensible—indeed if I had some fashion books of 25 or 30 years ago I fancy the blues would flee even sooner.

Just look—on a summer day many years ago—a summer day, mark you—I donned a new gown. The thermometer needle—is it a needle?—was pointing to a nice warm 85° degrees in the shade, and nice little trickles of perspiration were oozing from beneath the wire "rat" over which my pompadour was arranged.

The dress itself was sheer linen, but—it was affectionately attached to a good heavy rose-colored sateen foundation. It had ruffles around the bottom of the skirt, which had to be held up out of the dust as best one could, and even then it left a splendid dust-colored track across your high buttoned boots.

Around your neck, like the collar that used to choke victims of the Inquisition, was a collar of linen; this had high points behind your ears which made a generous anointing of cold cream necessary on its removal.

Crowning all was a large hat laden with flowers and skewered to your hair with two or three dangerously dagger-like weapons, commonly called hat pins. Then you laboriously pulled on tight gloves, and with a parasol in one hand and your skirts daintily gathered up in the other, you sallied forth.

Comfortable? Oh, no. But stylish? Yes! So what of the suffering—it was all so thought we who endured—the only thing to be done. So now, when you look at someone of the age you were then, arrayed in a collarless, sleeveless dress, silk stockings, sandals, and either bare-headed or with a hat so light as to be negligible, it is only natural to think that though the fashions get queerer and queerer, they do not subject their victims to the long, drawn-out torture of the past.

We women are queer; on matters that really count we can stand pretty firmly, but fashions seem to lull our wills to sleep, and like Mary's lamb, we follow on.

Rob Robin Comes Back Early

BY RUTH DINGMAN HEBB

Mocker, the Mockingbird, introduced the chums to his friend, the Carolina Wren, who, like Mocker, had been spending the winter in Toronto.

"Why, you are very much like our friend, Jenny, the House Wren, with your reddish-brown back, head and tail and your dull white breast," exclaimed Chub, the Chickadee.

"Except that I am much larger," replied the Wren. "As a matter of fact, I weigh about twice as much as she does. You will also notice that my back is a rustier color than any of the other Wrens and that I have a pretty white line over my eye."

As he talked the Wren darted and flitted in and out of the piles of brush and thickets, so that the chums had to keep moving to keep up the conversation. He would occasionally give odd little calls and then a snatch of song.

"You sing beautifully," we hear," said Hattie Nuthatch to the Wren. "And since you are such a very rare visitor in this country we would love to hear a few little selections from you."

Obligingly the Wren stopped his nervous jumping around and perched on a limb. He gave a clear, ringing note.

"That sounds to me as if he were saying, 'where-ade, where-ade, where-ade tea-kettle, tea-kettle, tea-kettle,'" commented Mrs. Pecker, "but he certainly has a lovely voice."

"His voice reminds me a little of the call of Cresty, the Cardinal," said Chubby. "We must go and see Cresty. He's supposed to be up in Forest Hill Village this winter."

Suddenly the Wren gave an alarmed dash from his perch and disappeared behind a stump.

"Why, what has happened? Where has he gone?" asked Chub.

"Oh, he's been scared by some-thing," explained the Mockingbird. "My friend is rather suspicious and easily disturbed, and I'm afraid he won't come back and sing for you any more this morning."

"Oh, what a shame!" mourned Mr. Pecker. "I meant to ask him about his nest."

"He nests in a hollow fence-pest or an old, dead stump, or even in a deserted hole of one of your Woodpeckers," said Mocker, turning to Pecker. "He builds a rather bulky nest made out of all sorts of things, such as twigs, straw, moss, feathers and hair."

"Thank you, Mr. Mockingbird, for supplying the information," said Pecker. "Now, let's go and hunt for the Cardinal."

On their way in search of Cresty, the chums kept watching for any other birds that might be around.

"Are my eyes deceiving me, or is that Rob Robin over there?" said Cora Chickadee suddenly.

"Why, for goodness sake!" exclaimed Chubby. "It is!"

"Hello, Rob!" chorused the little group. "It's simply grand to see you. My you're back early."

"Yes, I got here last Saturday, February the twenty-seventh," said Rob. "And I nearly froze to death, it was so cold. I made an awful mistake. I should have waited longer. I don't believe I'll go on north to Newmarket for a little while yet."

"Well, come as soon as you can," the chums urged him. "We're going home ourselves tomorrow."

NOTES TO YOU

A Jarring Note

We don't suppose you care much, but sometime ago we wrote an enormously interesting article on snoring. In it we dealt, in our own inimitable manner, with the value of variety in snoring.

We pointed out, for example, the virtues of the Spanish snore—done in 6-8 time; the charm of the Viennese snore, done in waltz rhythm, and then swung into a discussion of the merits of multiple snorers—duets, trios, close and not-so-close harmony, etc. And we really did ourselves proud on the etc.

Then we sent our masterpiece to the publishers. All the publishers. And the publishers all had a word for it. The word was "No." The last one to whom it was sent, however, offered us a most valuable suggestion. What the public wanted, he said, was not advice on how to snore, but some helpful hints on how to stop snoring.

Opportunity, in the shape of a recently acquired room-mate, has knocked on our door and offered us the chance to do some research in this subject. Our room-mate is a super-snorer. Banging on the wall, throwing slippers at the door, or squeaking the bed springs won't stop him. These familiar, every-day noises fail to bring him back to a non-snoring, semi-conscious state.

But after a series of experiments we have discovered a few less-familiar noises that do the trick very nicely. Our imitation of the first lesson in bassoon-playing, and of the death-call of the gun, seem to be particularly effective.

We are now kept awake by a fear that our room-mate's subconscious mind will get accustomed to these noises too, and start snoring all over again. It's a problem.

An Oriental Note

Being an Irishman is, of course, the finest thing in the world. But if we weren't an Irishman, we would like to be Chinese, if it could be arranged. We like the quiet way they go about their business. They are, we believe, the most honest people in the world. And we admire their unflinching courtesy and unobtrusive kindness.

Of the latter characteristic we observed a shining example this week. We were discussing with the local laundryman the time necessary to cleanse our shirt, when a number of children stuck their heads in the doorway and asked in unison, "Too busy?" To which our laundryman regretfully replied, "Too busy."

A few minutes later we met the same children gambling up Main St. We sought the reason why they had asked the laundryman if he were too busy.

"If he's not too busy," a small boy explained, "he'll come to the counter and write your name for you in Chinese. It's swell."

"Personally, we try to be polite to our boss. If we are behind with our room-rent we are polite to our landlord. We stop there. Why be polite to people who can't fire you or eject you? But in China they teach their sons differently. . . . our laundryman can take the time and trouble to be kind to the children of another race—to write their names for them in Chinese."

"It's swell."

A few maple trees are already being tapped near Brockville, and an early run of sap is expected.

Alberta cattlemen, with nearly a million head of cattle on their ranches and only scant supplies of feed available, are praying for a chinook, a warm wind from the Pacific that will melt snow drifts under which the grass has been buried since Christmas.

The total number of loans under the home improvement plan up to Jan. 31 is 3,359, amounting to $1,501,167, it was stated by Finance Minister Dunning on Monday.

The gambling of speculators and profiteers was far more serious than "bingo," Rev. Father A. T. B. Haines, rector of the Church of Christ the King, said in Toronto, on Sunday. He spoke of the bingo craze as associated with the general craze to prohibit, whereas the Christian training should teach self-control.

Praise for maintenance of standards that preserve sense of brotherhood, at a time when European youth was being welded into militaristic units, was voiced by Lord Tweedsmuir at a dinner of the Boy Scouts Association in Toronto on Saturday.

because we were such an object of curiosity.

"Of the 12 Chinese women who taught in the missionary school, not one weighed 100 pounds. Their ages were from 13 to 35 and their weight from 73 to 95 pounds. They were very thin from generations of poor food and the foot binding which prevented them from taking any active part in life. They will be much improved in a generation or two. The women are now enjoying athletics, a thing that the foot binding prevented.

"China is not heathen, but a country of many religions. The people as Christianity has done. The Chinese do not like to have denominations, they are establishing the Church of Christ in China and any group may join the Chinese church. It is remarkable how many Chinese have been trained in leadership. The Europeans are in an advisory capacity.

"Szechwan is one of the most productive provinces in China. They have few famines, occasional droughts, and all kinds of climate. Where we lived it was semi-tropical. The temperature rarely went below 40 nor above 100 and it was always damp.

"I was never so cold in my life as I was in China. I never wore so many clothes, and I was so glad I had warm ones. There is no central heating, and the floors were usually of cement. If you put your heels on the floor, keeping your soles off, it took longer for the cold to penetrate.

"In the hot weather you don't perspire, you sweat. Even the nights did not get cool. I tried a sort of things, putting newspapers under your head was suggested, but the crackling would wake you up. I finally worked out a scheme by which I got some sleep. I would start out in my own bed. When that got too hot I would move to another one, until I had used practically every bed in the house, and I had had some sleep. This heat did not last long, however. I was surprised to find that the Chinese suffered from it as much as we did.

"We were the only mission working in our city, Jungshien (Gloria City), though there were more before the trouble of 1926. This is a walled city of from 35 to 40 thousand people. We were fortunate in that we did not have to live in the centre of the city. There were five foreigners, three W. M. S. workers and our two selves. Whenever we had a party or a prayer meeting, we knew there would be five people. It got so that I found it nerve-racking to be in a large group of my own people.

"Our compound was about half an acre with an eight foot wall around it. The house was built in foreign style, of grey brick. It was impossible to keep wallpaper on the walls, if we could have got the paper in the first place. We had a colored wash for the walls instead.

"We followed our own customs as closely as possible. This is necessary for health. There was no running water, sewerage, or electric lights. We had our three regular meals, with dinner in the middle of the day.

"This was not only because it fitted in with our work much better, but it was best that the meat be cooked as soon as it was bought and not left to stand for a few hours before it was used. There is no ice. We used the native flour, ground between two stones, that you would not recognize as flour. Baking powder is unknown, as the Chinese either steam their food or cook it on top of the stove. They never bake.

"We had to refine our sugar and salt. Everything required in the kitchen needed to be changed before we could use it. For cereal, we had to get the grain, wash it, dry it, and then prepare it for table use. Housekeeping, therefore, takes a great deal of planning.

"We had our own cows. The milk had to be boiled. We made butter every day because there was no ice and no way of keeping it. The milk never went sour, it just went bad. Every drop of water we used had to be boiled.

"You can well imagine why we needed servants. There was so much to do in just getting the food ready for use. You can't just go to the store and get what you want. The house had to be scrubbed from top to bottom every day as well. The Chinese are very slow workers any way.

"Then there were the bugs. Malarial mosquitoes, flies, cockroaches, and others too numerous to mention. There was an epidemic of typhoid every spring. They would start to come up through the floors at about 7 o'clock at night and we would stay up and pour boiling water and oil down the cracks. Fleas were another of the trials and the doctors were troubled with lice, which cause the dread typhus fever, as they always came in with the coolies.

"As for the Chinese life, their houses were of mud, one storey high, with a tile roof and a hole for a window. The door is just a gate put on at night. There is no glass.

"The floor is of earth, and I forgot to mention that the Chinese, or other Orientals, do not use handkerchiefs. They just spit everywhere. There are spit-holes in the floor, and you have to watch for them, or you will get your heel caught. In the better-class homes they have huge spittoons.

"There are no parks around the Chinese homes as land is too valuable. As a rule there is one room to a family. Privacy is unknown.

"Someone was trying to get the Chinese women to take more baths. The river is outside the city and the water has to be hauled up. Once you get enough water for a bath, there are so many other uses to which it can be put, that it is seldom that they feel they can use it just for bathing. Even when they have the water, there is no privacy in which to have a bath, except within the Chinese bed. Under these circumstances, I don't think many people would take very many baths.

"Water is very precious and is used for many purposes. It is usually thick when it is finally thrown out in the ditch which runs down the street.

"Then there are the smells. There are no words to describe them, and I was at a loss until I came across the phrase, 'The 10,000 mismatched smells of China.'

"Advantages and disadvantages follow from the institution of the Chinese family. As the sons always bring their wives home, the daughter-in-law is the servant of her husband and her husband's family. Sometimes they agree and sometimes they don't.

"The infant engagements and child marriages have to be gone through with, and the children are quite helpless. There was one case of a Chinese W. M. S. teacher of about 20. She had been engaged as a child to marry a farmer. She had to go through with the wedding. As her first child was a girl, her mother-in-law became cross, and no one went to the girl for three days. The baby died, but the mother managed to pull through. It was fortunate that her next child was a son.

"If there is a family of sons, they look after each other. They have a truly communistic existence in the family. Just the same, there are some terrible rows.

"Chinese courtesy is unique. They always have time and they expect you to have time. The younger generation are losing it to some extent. The Chinese are never in a hurry.

"The missionary's wife is expected to contribute something to the mission. Some teach, do hospital or evangelical work. My job was music. English is taught in the schools, and I did not have much Chinese. I taught choral work to the senior classes, as they had more English. I could only tell them to sit down and stand up, but their response was splendid.

"You could hardly call the Chinese musical. They were interested in trying out music to see if they could do it. They don't use semitones and that leaves monotony. They use time, but they don't accent, and you never know where you are."

Mrs. Sibley played some of the popular hymns.

"The girls have the use of a small portable organ," she continued. "When they could play a hymn they considered that they had graduated. The girls were taught western music but they reverted to their own tunes when they were left to themselves.

"You can't expect much from them. Often they know the alphabet and one or two words, but some hardly know enough of the alphabet to name the notes on the piano. They don't know harmony."

Interesting informal discussion and questions were enjoyed at the close of Mrs. Sibley's talk. She brought out samples of the work done by the Chinese.

In the absence of Mrs. W. H. S. Cane, Miss Velma Widdifield said grace. The toast to the King was proposed by Mrs. H. M. Hooker.

Proposing the toast to the club, Mrs. W. H. Eves spoke of the opportunity of serving others. Mrs. C. S. Gilbert responded, telling of some of the work accomplished during the past year.

Mrs. A. Brammer proposed to toast to "Our Guests." In thanking the club, on behalf of the guests, Mrs. George Hollingshead, Young mentioned the assistance the musical club of which she was a member had received before her marriage.

Miss Gwen Lambert was guest soloist and sang in her usual lovely manner. Mrs. Wood accompanied her.

Mrs. Max Smith, president of the club, was toastmistress.

Committee Outlines Plan To Restore Wild Life In King

Aubrey Davis Will Finance Survey For First Year

Forty years ago King township boasted of streams teeming with fish and brushland abounding in wild life. Since then the brush has largely been cleared away, the swamps drained, and the streams have dwindled to insignificant little creeks.

In an effort to restore the abundant natural growth of years gone by, five men, affiliated with the University of Toronto, are making a detailed survey of the township to determine what methods should be used.

It is all a plan, conceived by Aubrey Davis, Newmarket, who roamed the hills and valleys of this district as a boy. He fished the streams and tramped through the heavily wooded bush near his father's home at Kinghorn, a few miles east of here.

Mr. Davis will finance the plan for one year, when a report will be submitted to him on the possibilities of the township's restoration. A. F. Coventry, department of biology; J. R. Dymond, of the Royal Ontario Museum; K. Mayall, forestry graduate; W. J. K. Harkness, Ontario fisheries research laboratory, and E. Robertson, secretary of the Ontario Hunters' Game Protective Association, are the men who will conduct the survey.

The committee of five outlined their plan before King township council here last night.

"We hope to conduct a survey of King township with the object of bringing back, as far as possible, something like the con-

Special Price Reductions

In view of the low price of eggs, and particularly because of the high price of feeds, we are pleased to announce that we can pass on to our customers a reduction of 1c per chick for chicks hatched from certain hatches only.

We are strongly of the opinion that egg prices are going up in the near future; if so, these bargains cannot be replaced. Our supply is limited, so order early and don't be disappointed.

going to do about our old swimming hole at Nobleton," interjected Councillor Herbert Goodfellow, laughingly.

"In the last 10 years there has been a gradual cutting down of the supply of headwaters," explained W. J. K. Harkness. "That can be traced chiefly to the clearing away of swamp areas at the sources of small streams."

"We can put up dams and hold the headwaters back, and by that method control the flow of water," he said. "Every time a tree is planted it does some good, regardless of its location."

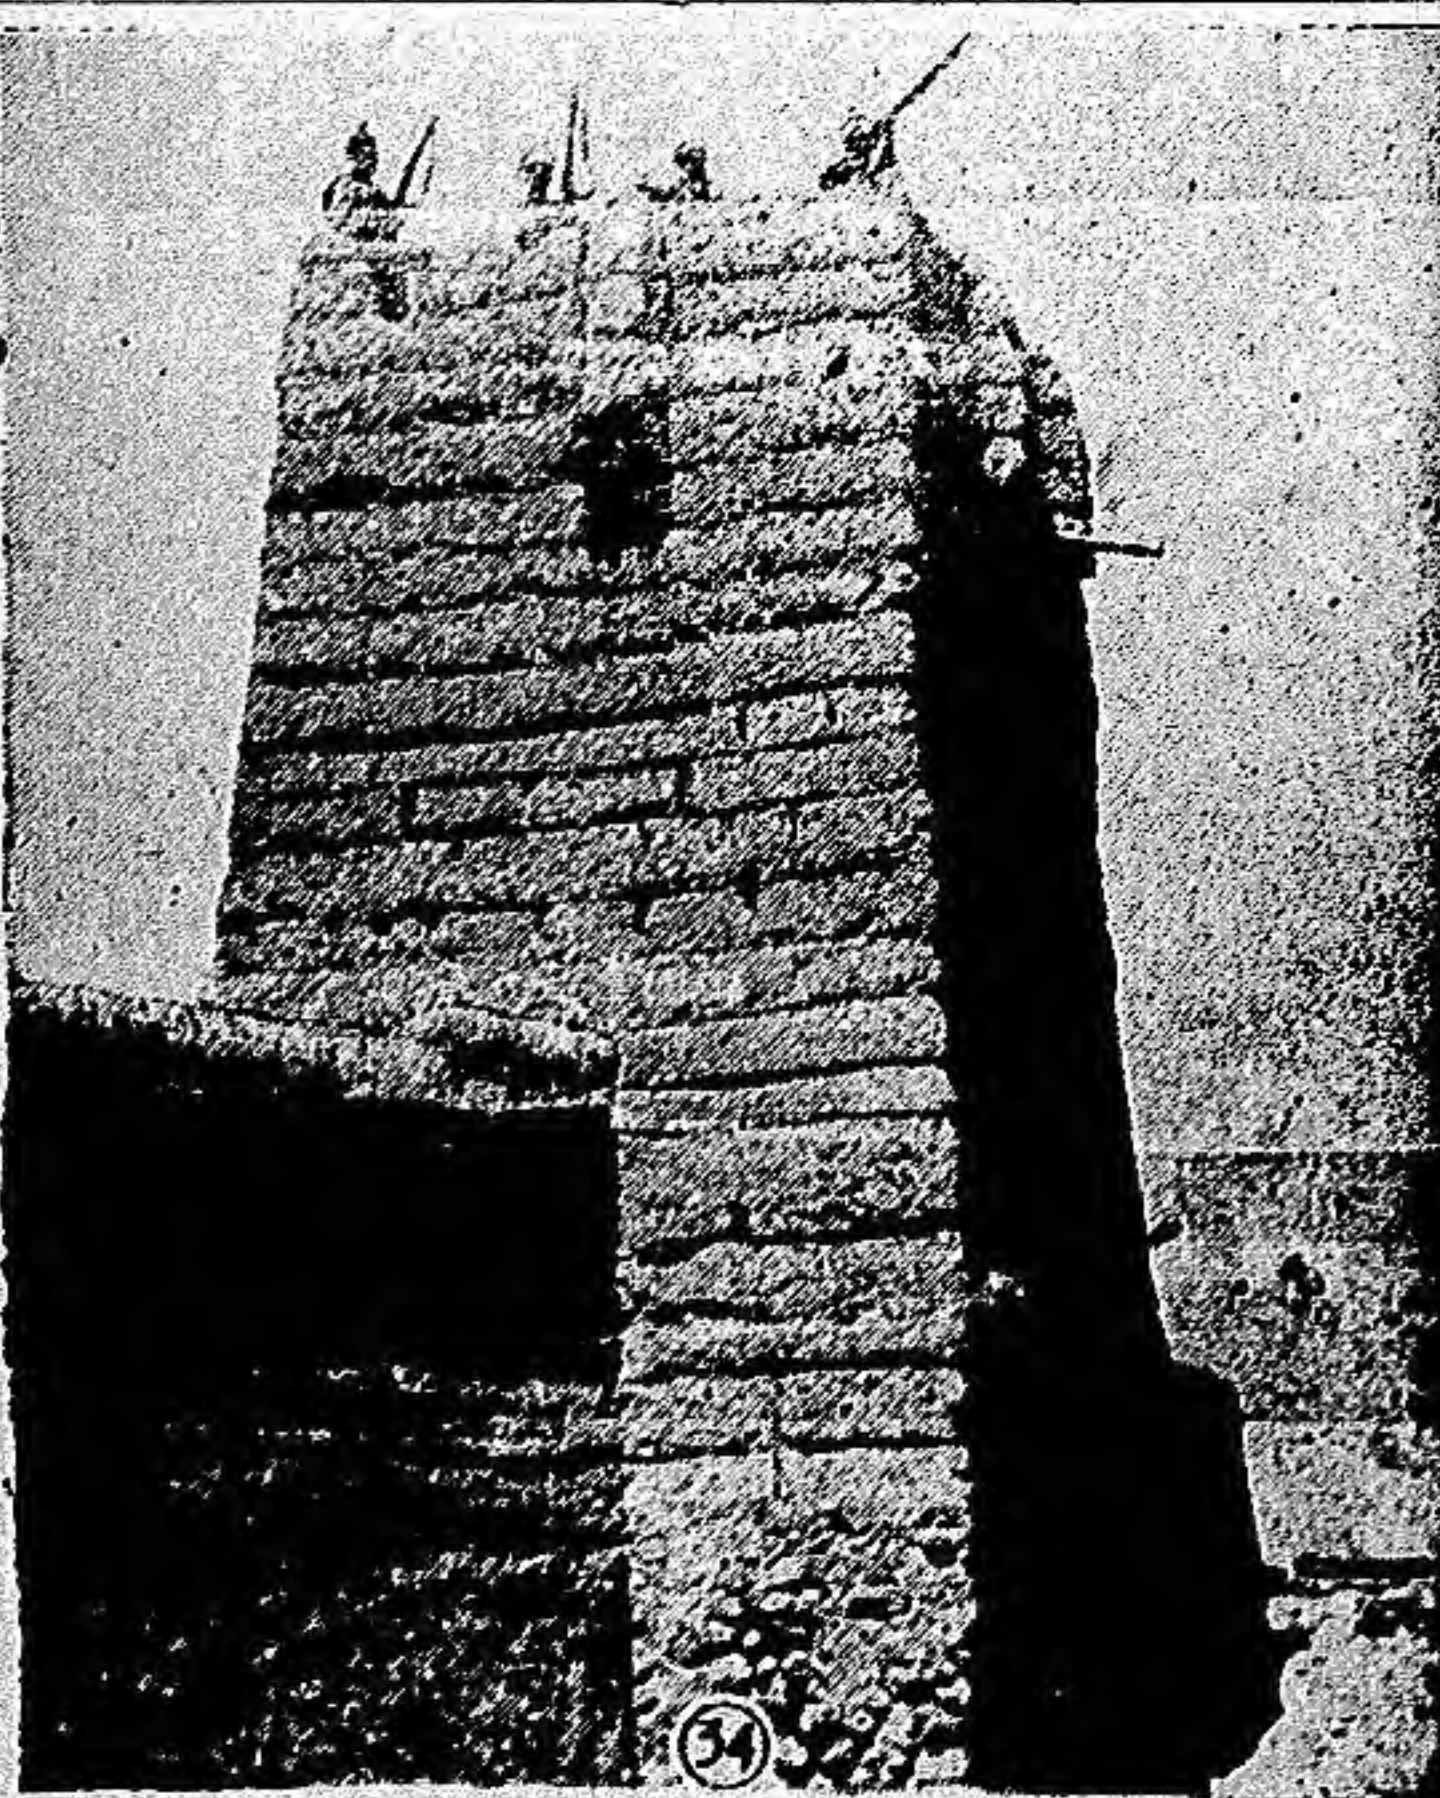

J. R. Dymond of the Royal Ontario Museum declared that he was convinced that some of the natural game life, which was common in this district 40 years ago, can be brought back. The Rough Grouse and the Snowshoe Rabbit were once very common here, he said.

"The first and primary step will be to reforest depleted areas," Mr. Dymond declared. "The deliberate marsh draining in the north has had a definite effect on the fertility of farmlands in other sections of the township. The township has an area of 140 square miles, representing approximately 88,000 acres, and has all the natural elements to complete the plan which has been proposed."

In Memoriam

Clarkson—In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Ward Clarkson, who died suddenly March 6, 1936.

We little thought when leaving home
He would no more return
That he in death so soon would sleep.

And leave us here to mourn,
He is gone from us but not forgotten.

Never shall his memory fade;
Sweetest thoughts shall ever linger.

Round the spot where he is laid.
—Sadly missed by Wife and Family.

Marrill — In loving remembrance of dear mother, Lucretia Marrill, who, after many years of suffering, was called home on Mar. 9, 1935.

Off in danger, off in woe,
Onward Christians, onward go;
Bear the toil, maintain the strife,
Strengthened with the Bread of Life!

Let not sorrow dim your eye,
Soon shall every tear be dry.
Let not fears your course impede,
Great your strength if great your need.

—Sadly missed by Connell, Beatrice and family.

School Notes

By Pedagogy

Teachers and parents often expect too much of children in the matter of honor. We take it for granted that they will be as well-behaved in our absence as in our presence.

Honor, a lofty quality indeed, is not too often seen in the adult world. It is a mistake to exact a standard of behavior which is frequently unattainable among men and women. Good sense would indicate caution in calling upon a spiritual quality that does not mature early, and is rare, in its purity, among men.

Teach spiritual values by word and example, but refrain from too heavy a burden on unseasoned growth, lest you destroy it at the roots.

JUNIORS PLAY BIG GAME IN AURORA TONIGHT

Fireworks tonight! Aurora's peppy junior squad, described in a lurid Lindsay handbill as "the class of the league," play the second part of the two-game, goals-to-count fixture in the Aurora arena tonight.

The high-scoring Aurorans, after trouncing East York in a best-two-out-of-three series, 7-2 and 4-1, went on to Lindsay to tie-up the team there 3-3. So Lindsay and Aurora go into the game tonight on an even footing. More used to their own rink, the Aurorans are picked to walk away from the Lindsay squadron and go on to greater glory.

Newmarket fans turned out in large numbers to see the Aurora-East York game here last week, and got a thrill out of the fast, wide-open style of play. An even larger throng is expected to pack the Aurora arena tonight, for the game is a crucial one, and so far as the dope is now, it looks like a real battle.

"Fat" James, stalwart defence-man for the Aurorans, was a standout against Lindsay on Tuesday. He scored two of the three Aurora counters, both of them in the first period. "Wink" Bernard got credit for the third tally in the second period. It was a rough game and Groves got a nasty slash over his eye.

Local interest in the Aurora juniors is very keen, as there are seven Newmarket lads on the line-up. While Aurora gets great credit for moulding one of the finest teams in this group, Newmarket should take some pride in the fact that it has helped furnish the material.

Sutton, Cannington Draw In Initial Playdown Encounter

Hockey Rivals Battle To Tie On Sutton's Home Ice

Sutton and Cannington played to a 4-4 draw after 60 minutes of close checking hockey which lacked the usual combination play, at Sutton arena on Thursday night.

Milroy and Burchell combined for Sutton's opening counter, Burchell getting the final shot, leg, on Cannington's left wing, scored the score with Hallward scoring from a scramble a few minutes later to put Cannington one up. Sutton tied the score when Burchell went in alone and put the rubber past Baker.

Culverwell was tripped after making a clever individual play and Johnston of Cannington was handed a penalty. Carpenter led a couple of smart rushes only to have Baker bat the puck out. The play became slightly faster, but was not in the usual wide-open style.

As the second canto began, Carpenter missed a perfect pass directly in front of the net. Burchell returned shortly after, on an individual effort on which he beat the entire team to score.

Five minutes later Shupe passed to Culverwell in front of the visitors' cage, Culverwell beating Baker, who hadn't a chance.

Ing got his second counter for Cannington from a scramble, during which Smith in the Sutton net was tripped by Wilson. Johnston, on the Cannington defence, scored the final goal from a scramble in front of the net when the defence failed to clear a rebound from Rennie's shot. Shupe was serving a penalty at the time.

The game lacked the usual aggressiveness on the part of the local squad, while the Cannington crew fought hard all the way and are sure to be a real threat to the advance of the Greenshirts.

Burchell, Carpenter and Culverwell performed well for Sutton, while Pearsall, Ing and Rennie were the pick of the visitors.

Teams — Sutton: goal, Smith; defence, Shupe, Burchell; centre, Milroy; wings, Burchell, Carpenter; alternates, Schmidt, McKenzie, and Brady.

Cannington: goal, Baker; defence, Johnston, Goodie; centre, Penning; wings, Rennie, Pearsall; alternates, Hallward, Ing, Wilson and J. Hallward.

Referee: Mike Rodden, Toronto.

HOCKEY
Bradford H. S. vs. Pickering II's
Bradford high school pulled a surprise game on the Pickering seconds Saturday afternoon, and before they knew it, Pickering were the losers of a 3-2 match.

Owen Sound Jrs. vs. Pickering I's
On Monday Pickering's hockey caravan pulled out for distant places, ended up at Owen Sound. Here a game was played, and despite the ambitious undertaking, the Newmarket team acquitted themselves well, being held to a 3-2 score. When teams like this play, the hockey can't be anything but good.

U. T. S. vs. Pickering I's
In Toronto on Monday, Pickering met their old rivals, U. T. S., again, and though several of the mainstays of the team were still finding their way back from Owen Sound, they managed to come off a good second best in a 3-4 game.

Aurora vs. Pickering II's
Two well-matched teams, Aurora and Pickering II's, played a matched game resulting in the matched score 2-2. Match that, if you can.

Frigidaires vs. Pickering I's
Weary and worn, the first team could do no more than hold the visiting Frigidaires to a 1-1 count, when they met here Wednesday. The ice was only a memory when the game began, and as a result the play was slow and many tumbles were featured. With milder weather and thoughts of baseball in the air, this probably spells fims for the college's hockey season.

BASKETBALL

Malvern vs. Pickering I's
In their return game with Malvern in Toronto, Pickering first once more trimmed the city squad, but by not quite so much this time. Excuses were overheard explaining why the score wasn't greater, but let the team rest assured no alibis are necessary. If this winning streak keeps up, history may repeat itself with another eastern Canada championship squad.

St. Andrew's Jrs. vs. Pickering Juniors

In their game against St. Andrew's in Aurora last Tuesday, the Junior Prep team of Pickering college played, as was to be expected, their best. Evidently their best was good enough, for they returned the victors in a 13-13 match.

T. C. S. vs. Pickering I's
Revenge was the motive for the massacre that Pickering's marauders (only last two games) first basketball squad dished out to visiting T. C. S. on Saturday. The Port Hope team's playing seemed lifeless, and certainly, in the second half at least, seemed pointless.

At the half-way mark the Blue and Greys led 25-15, and though the game was only half over, the game was more than half won. Pickering's star was rising, T. C. S.'s waning. A scant added two points was ineffectual in holding the heavy barrage of the Newmarket cagers. The curtain came down on a final score of 58-17.

GREENSHIRTS BEAT

The Cannington team putting on a strong offensive in a last effort to tie the score, only to have Burchell break away to net his third counter of the game.

Cannington was finally rewarded for its efforts when they bulged the twine for their second goal. This gave them a new lease on life, and although they threw caution to the winds they were unable to beat Smith in the Sutton net.

Culverwell, Carpenter, Milroy and Burchell broke away several times when Cannington were playing every man up, but Sutton outguessed them until Milroy finally beat him for his second goal of the night, to make the score read Sutton, 6; Cannington, 2, as the game ended.

Culverwell, Milroy and Burchell were the pick of the Sutton team, while Roney, Pearsall and Seim performed well for the losers.

Referee: T. Mitchell, Hamilton.

KESWICK PLANS SHOWERS TO AID BAZAAR

Groups Busy In Preparation For Annual Event

Rev. Mr. Fockler occupied the pulpit at the United church on Sunday morning and voiced thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Marritt for the beautiful flowers which contributed to the brightness of the service.

The choir, under Mr. Switzer's leadership, sang a special selection. Mr. Fockler, continuing his morning theme, "The third saying of Jesus at the Cross," gave his congregation many thoughts to think over.

Announcement was made of a reception of new members on Easter Sunday. Anyone desiring to join the church should communicate with Rev. Mr. Fockler.

The Moody commemoration service, postponed owing to the inclement weather, will be held this Sunday evening.

One of the finest special services this winter at the United church was that of last Sunday evening when the adult Bible class of the Sunday-school, taught by Mrs. William Folland, took complete charge of the service.

Mrs. Pollard, the leader, gave a wonderfully fine address on "Prayer," assisted by the following: announcement of hymns, Mr. W. Pollard; prayer, Mr. William Marritt; lesson reading, Messrs. Merv. Connell and Erwin Winch; solo, Mrs. R. Link.

The choir sang a special anthem, Mrs. Tomlinson taking the solo part. Announcements were presented by Rev. Mr. Fockler. Mrs. Pollard welcomes all adult members of the congregation to her very interesting class.

The Glee club is held every Tuesday evening in the public school. All young people are asked to join if interested in music. It is under the directorship of Miss Marie Draper.

There will be a shower for the fish pond of the bazaar (whose convener is Mrs. McGenerty) at Mrs. Lloyd Pollock's home on the afternoon of Mar. 12. On Mar. 16, Mrs. Babs will also entertain for the annual bazaar. An apron shower will be held at her home, "Hollywood Lodge."

The regular Y. P. S. meets on Friday at 8 p.m. Following this meeting at 9 p.m., the group will join in the study of "Co-operatives."

The Mission Band is to be held after school on Friday afternoon. The monthly meeting of the W. M. S. of the United church will be held on Mar. 10 at 2.30 p.m.

The towel shower held on Saturday at Mrs. W. Davidson's home was a great success. The Davidson home is well known for its hospitality and Saturday's event proved no exception.

Mrs. Davidson, who had not spared herself in order that her guests should have a thoroughly happy afternoon, welcomed them in the cheerful living-room. Two contests were conducted, guessing the number present, won by Keswick's grand bride of 50 years, Mrs. William Marritt, and a bean-guessing contest, won by Mrs. Cecil Grant and Miss M. Fockler.

Decorative and delicious refreshments were served in both dining and breakfast rooms. Both ten tables were artistically arranged with spring flowers. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Pedlar, Mrs. Grant and Miss Terry.

Much enjoyment and laughter was caused by the ten cup reading of Miss McKay and Miss Marjorie Glover, which added greatly to the afternoon's success. Many lovely towels were received for the booth at the bazaar.

Anyone having taken the wrong count from the Christian church on Sunday evening is asked to get in touch with Mr.

Charles Anderson next Sunday morning.

Mrs. Connell Marritt and Miss Joy Marritt have had a relapse of the flu and are both very sick. Among the sick are Mr. and Mrs. Roy Rose, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Brown, Mrs. Oldham, and Mr. Gordon Hamilton.

Deepest sympathy is extended to Mrs. R. Switzer in the loss of her brother, and to Mrs. E. Fairbairn in the loss of her mother.

A Real Fish Story

One of the local fishermen who was boasting of how well he slept while on the ice awakened the other night thinking it was raining and the rain dripping on his head. He awoke to investigate and found that over his cot was a shelf where he kept some provisions and on it was a pound of butter. In his warm fish-house it had all melted away and he will not need any brilliantine.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Foster are moving away, as are also Mr. and Mrs. Les. McKnight in the near future.

Mr. Ralph Link has been ill with flu, as has Miss Gladys Fockler.

Mr. Byron King is away taking a course on radio work.

Miss W. Grey of Toronto was the guest of Mrs. Ross Pollock on Sunday.

Mr. Alvin Rye is away on jury.

Mr. Alvin Rye and Mr. Jack Draper have exchanged businesses.

Mr. Roy Pollock is back at school.

HARRY MARTIN NAMED MEMBER OF COMMITTEE

Harry Martin of Newmarket was a member of the committee of six which reported on social conditions in Kingston at the regular meeting of the League for Social Reconstruction, Queen's University, recently. Mr. Martin dealt with problems handled by the probation officer.

W. H. Madden

The death of the Rev. William Henry Madden, on June 29, 1936, was the termination of the life of a minister of far-reaching influence in many congregations of the United church of Canada.

Born in 1853, entering the Methodist ministry in 1875, and ordained in 1879, continuing instant in service for nearly 40 years, and entering his eternal rest in 1936, suggests something of the pivotal days of his ministerial activities.

At once the son and grandson, the brother and father of Methodist preachers, and himself the leader of many lives into the service of Jesus Christ, the builder of churches and the counsellor of many Christians in their distresses, their sorrows and perplexities — these facts reveal his natural tendencies and acquired forces in the work of the Christian ministry.

His grandfather, ordained by Bishop Ashbury in New York in 1804, his father, ordained by Rev. Henry Wilkinson in St. Catharines in 1845, himself ordained by Rev. John Shaw in Port Hope in 1879, makes clear a Methodist heritage and Christian legacy which enriched his sermons, his prayers, his conversation, and every activity of his ministry.

He was the beloved minister, during his probation, of Pickering, Sunderland, Aurora and Markham circuits—and, since his ordination, of Eugene Falls, Minden, Sutton, Heathcote, Hillsdale, Laurel, Grahamsville, St. Vincent, Cookstown, Schonberg, Temperanceville, Goodwood, and Sutton. In 1916 Rev. Mr. Madden superannuated. Since that time he has been in labors abundant, in Toronto. Always deeply spiritual, fervently evangelistic, and keenly sympathetic, he was greatly beloved by the people in the congregations where he worshipped, among whom his name is an ointment poured forth.

His funeral was largely attended by ministers of the United church, Rev. W. J. Johnston of Eglinton United church, Toronto, officiating both at a private service at Morley Bedford's parlors on Eglinton Ave. and at a public service in Eglinton United church. Rev. A. F. MacKenzie, Rev. James Hodges, Rev. C. W. Watch, Rev. J. W. Stewart and Rev. R. N. Burns—the last three class-mates of the deceased—assisted. Interment took place in the family plot at Mount Pleasant cemetery, Toronto.

His wife, a life-long and devoted helpmate, predeceased him on April 21. His children have the comfort of the Heavenly Father's love, and remembering a life wholly devoted to the work of the Master, the joy that His Master's "Well done" greeted his entrance to his eternal home.

He leaves to mourn: Three sisters, Misses Sarah and May, both of Prince Albert, Ont.; Mrs. King, Alta; and three brothers, Rev. F. B. Madden, of Bloomington, Ill.; Rev. S. N. Madden, Bluff, Ill.; and George Madden, Los Angeles, Calif.; two daughters, Mrs. H. N. Wilkinson, Toronto, and Mrs. W. J. Broley, Cookstown; and two sons, H. P. Madden, Toronto, and Rev. F. W. Madden, Queensville.

CLUB REVIEWS AUTOBIOGRAPHY

"Autobiography," by Gilbert
K. Chesterton, was the book discussed by Mrs. Crossley of Toronto in her address to the Newmarket Ladies' Reading club, which held its second open meeting of the season at the home of Mrs. Geo. Young, Prospect Ave., on Saturday afternoon.
This paradoxical book, serious,
but often irresistibly amusing,
was reviewed in masterly fashion
by the speaker. It is considered to be the greatest work of the journalist.
Mrs. Herman Gilroy introduced the speaker and welcomed the members and their guests. Miss N. Holladay moved the vote of thanks. Mr. Verne Playter contributed a pleasing piano solo.
At the social hour which followed, tea was poured by Mrs.
Frank Robinson and Mrs. Jos.
Wells.

FLOWERS AT HER FEET

By MARIE BLIZARD
COPYRIGHT, RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

By winning a $500 slogan contest, Alex Carey earns a promotion in the advertising agency
where she is employed and enlists
the personal interest of John Sayre, young president of the agency, whom she secretly admires. Coming to New York following her parents' death, she has made close friends of Kathleen Crosby and her cousin, Kim Preston. Alex and Sayre begin to mix business and pleasure. She sees him frequently and begins to care for him deeply but suspecting he is in love with Carol Cushing. Meanwhile Alex entertains Bill Boyd, her old sweetheart, who is visiting New York.
Suddenly offered a better position elsewhere, Alex discusses it with John after he has shown her a bracelet. When she has informed him of her desire to go elsewhere
he puts the bracelet in his pocket.
(Now go on with the story)

CHAPTER 20

"It isn't that I want to leave here and yet I do, John"—Alex's voice compelled him to look at her. "Isn't it best for both of us?"

"Perhaps you're right. You usually are." He smiled at her.
"When do you go?"
"Not for a week or two. I won't leave any loose ends here. And, of course, I'll always be connected with the agency in a sense because the Warner account will remain here."

So Alex left the Sayre-Coulton agency. Left the daily hours high-lighted for her by suddenly catching John Sayre's voice, by hearing him stride in the corridor.
But she still had John Sayre.
He wanted to know all about the new job, they discussed "pros" and "cons" of procedure. She set him straight on some things that had been bothering him in his agency. It was just as before but the self-consciousness of their positions had left her.

There was much to be done in her new job. There were nine persons in the organization in New York. Alex was the only one thoroughly familiar with the work being done in New York.
So it was Alex who worked early and late.

The first six weeks found them
well organized but by that time Alex was worn out. Shadows painted her usually smooth cheeks. She was restless and often cross. She found herself more than once giving a sharp answer and was immediately ashamed.

She did it once to Kim and was doubly sweet to him because she was sorry.

Kim was sitting across from her at dinner. Kim said, "Alex, how would you like to go to Mexico?"
"Oh, I'd like to go to Mexico,
all right. I'd also like to go to Spain and Algiers and . . ."
"Will you come with me?"
"Shall we set out in a pea-green boat and . . ."

"I'm serious. I'm going to Mexico again. Mary me, Alex."
"Oh! Alex put down her spoon and gave him a troubled gaze. "I can't, Kim. I'm sorry."
"I know," he looked beyond
her. "I know all about you, Alex.
I know about that fellow you brought to Kathleen's. Sayre, of course. Are you in love with him?"

Alex felt her cheeks get warm.
"Certainly not."
He beamed. "Then, don't give me an answer now. Wait a little and think it over."
She could have told him right
then that she would never marry him but she thought it kinder not to. Perhaps, he would forget it all in a little time.

"Don't let's talk about it," she pleaded.
"Sorry, Alex, I can't help it.
You see I've been in love with you. I've been in love with you since the first day I saw you.
You're like a dream come true.
You bring something into a room that's intangible, lovely. You act more like—and appear less like a business woman than any other girl I've ever known. You talk about 'copy' and 'layouts'
and you look like the princess who let down her braid so that her lover might pull himself up to her ivory tower."

Years ago when Bill Boyd told her he loved her, he had said,
"You're the princess that makes a fellow feel like a knight who'd go up and shout 'boo!' to a dragon."

Alex didn't want to be loved like a princess. She wanted to be loved like a woman. She didn't want to be an ethereal creature to be made love to with flowers and music and stage sets. She wanted someone to love her for all the earthy reasons, to like her as well as to love her.

All the men who did love her,
loved her that way, but she was not to know.

She said, "Princesses weren't real. They were only story book characters."

"But they always lived happily ever after. 'Trite as it sounds to repeat it, the real story starts after the story book plot is finished."
Alex knew that and often thought of it after that night when John Sayre took her to the theatre and she twisted her ankle getting into his car.

"I'll be all right," she said.
"I'm sure I just turned it. It isn't sprained but I'm afraid we can't dance."

"Alex, will you come up to my place? We can have a bite to eat, sit before the fire, and I'll have a look at the ankle."
It was the first—and last—time
she ever went to his apartment alone with him.

He took off her slipper and felt her ankle tenderly. There was no swelling, but he made her put her foot on a cushion. Then they sat before the bright fire. The big room was in shadows at their back.

"Alex," he said slowly, "I think I'm beginning to fall in love."
She waited in an immense space.
"Do you mind?" He fondled her hand without looking at her.
"No," she said in a very small voice.
Then they were both on their feet and his arms were around her, his eyes searching her face, trying to read what was back of it. It told him nothing. She was afraid to let him see her happiness.
After a moment, he laid his cheek against hers and set her free.
"Come along," he said, "I'm going to take you home. Right now!"

Yes, Mr. Appleby, the order blanks have been sent to the home office. Your shipment should arrive by the end of the week. Miss Jarrett, check Mr.
Appleby's order at once.
John is beginning to fall in love with me.

Tell the Tribune reporter we will have the information she wants as soon as Kleermann gets back from Grand Rapids. Don't forget to have the photographs delivered before five. Ask the photographer if he hasn't made a mistake about the price? If he wouldn't pay more than $15 a shot and he's charged $25.
John is beginning to fall in love with me.

It's your lead, Kathleen. The bid is four Spades, isn't it? No hearts, partner. I think we can be unusually successful. I think I always get credit for them when they are sheer accidents.
That's five tricks, isn't it?
John is beginning to fall in love with me.

So coursed the song through her, the psalm that set the cadence in her heart—whatever else may have been in her mind
—at work, at play, and even in her sleep. She felt into slumber thinking of it and woke with a sense of excitement wrapped in its knowledge.

After John said that nothing had been changed, yet everything was changed. She saw and heard and breathed with a sharp, new everythingness, a quickening for everything about her. She felt peaceful waiting for him to say more.

More that she was not to hear.
She was alone for a few moments leaving her wraps in his bedroom on a Sunday afternoon when he had invited guests for supper.

She was powdering her nose
when Carol Cushing came into the room. She saw her in the mirror. Then she saw the bright, gleaming bracelet on her arm.
Feeling that she was turned to ice inside, Alex turned and her fascinated eyes fastened on the bracelet on Carol's arm. It was the bracelet she had seen in John's office.

Carol saw that sick stare, lifted the arm that wore the flashing bracelet, and said,
"Pretty, isn't it?"
Then she looked at Alex with an expression that implied confidence. "John gave it to me. I told him I'd rather have it than a ring."

"Lovely," Alex said through lips that ached as she moved them and she wondered if the word came out.

When Alex left after seeing Carol Cushing wearing the bracelet, John had shown her, Carol stood motionless for a minute. She was a little bit afraid. For once, she thought, she had overstepped her mark.
If John knew she had told Alex that he had given her the bracelet—

But then John never did know.
She'd been pulling the wool over his eyes for years and she could always deny her words. She shrugged elegant shoulders and applied a pencil to her brows.
She had a righteous feeling.
John would be a fool to get entangled with this girl that nobody knew. She didn't like Alex. Alex was too beautiful and too clever.

She walked out of the bedroom and into the drawing room. She'd be extra nice to Alex today. She looked around for her.
"Where's Alex?" she asked John.

"She was here and left." A slight frown darkened his face.
"She had said she had to go on to someone's house but she didn't look well."

"She told me she had a sick headache," Carol answered lightly.

Alex walked and walked. It was early spring, but she neither saw nor felt it. Around her around one thing stood out in the miserable swirl of her thoughts.
John had given Carol a diamond bracelet. "Instead of a ring." A ring meant an engagement. Well, why not?

He had only told her that he thought he was falling in love with her. He hadn't said he had.
He might even have been falling in love with her a little, while he loved Carol deeply. She couldn't hold that against him.
She knew enough about men to know that was possible.

Well, what she expected anything else? Of course she hadn't.
She brushed shameless tears
away and walked on leaden feet.
Late that night she went home.
Her things mocked her in the small apartment. The chair where he had sat. The ghost of his coat, his hat, where they had hung in her foyer closet, the burned place on the book-shelf
where he had left a cigarette.
Alex made herself a cup of tea, undressed in the dark and got into bed to stare down a sleepless night.

She would never see him again.
She would have to see him again. Was she going to be melodramatic and let him know forever that she loved him, that she had given him her heart
when he didn't want it?

She would see him again. She'd be merry, gay, and somehow let him know that he was not important to her, or as casually important as she was to him.
He called her at her office the next morning to ask if she were feeling better.
"Feeling better? There was nothing wrong with me." She tried to laugh.
"Carol said you had a headache. If I'd known that, I wouldn't have let you go alone."
So Carol "thought she had a headache." So Carol knew!
"It was quite all right." Think quickly. The truth is Bill Boyd, a very dear friend of mine from home was in New York." (Forgive me, Bill, for that lie.
Forgive me, John, I never wanted to lie to you.)

"Oh, Lochinvar?"
Alex hated John for a moment,
the sure, light way he said it.
Hated him the way women can hate those they love.
"Yes, he's going to be here all week, John."

He put the telephone back on the stand and barked orders to a blameless artist waiting for instructions. Then he cursed himself for a sophomoric fool.
He gave Alex his week and the next Monday he telephoned her.
"I have something important to tell you," he said.

"Come around at nine. I have a dinner engagement," she answered as coolly as she could.
She pulled the shades in her living room. The April moon must be blotted out. All things that hurt must be blotted out.
This was the night you say goodbye to him but he must not know that. Pretend he is just another man calling on you. You must be gay. Tell him about the amusing story you read last night.
Ask him if he's seen the Garbo film. Don't talk about the two of you. Seal your lips forever before you let him know what you know.

She dabbed her rouge into her cheeks where it stood out in bold blotches. Well, that way you couldn't see the pain that darkened her eyes.
"Hello," she held out her hand and smiled widely. So far so good. "I'm sorry I had to ask you to come so late."
"That's all right. I've missed you, Alex, and now I have to go away. Know," she said.

"Did you?" he looked surprised.
"I only knew it myself today.
There's an English firm that wants us to take over the American end of their business and I've got to leave Saturday. I'll probably be in England about six weeks."

No, she hadn't known that.
But what difference did it make whether he was in Hindustan, England, or New York? He was as lost to her as though planets divided them.
"Will that mean very much to the agency? I mean, won't that bring a tremendous revenue? Or will the exchange—"

She went on. Then he said something else and she brought up an editorial she had read on the subject.

When there was a little silence,
she brought it to life with an animated story about the Garbo film which they had both seen.
"Alex," he took both her hands.
She took them back. "What's the matter with you?"
"With me? She looked elaborately surprised. "Nothing. I know of." Smile Alex. Wider.
"Yes," he was troubled, "you don't seem at ease. You're not like yourself. I don't understand you."

She turned her back for a moment and crossed the room.
"Something has happened,"
he asked. She didn't deny it.
"Is it Boyd?"

Boyd? Oh, she'd told him that Bill Boyd was in town last week.
She didn't answer. Her silence was his answer.

He picked up his gloves and stick. "I shall I understand, Alex. Shall I see you before I sail?"

There wasn't a tear in her eyes.
They were all in her throat, but her voice got around them amazingly and sounded ordinary to her as she said, "Perhaps it would be best not to, John."

When he was gone, she stared at the door. "Goodbye," her lips formed the words before she crumbled, clutching the chintz curtain and pulling it to the floor with her. The phrase made no sound. It was empty, inarticulate, as she was to be.

It was April, cool, sweet. It was May, hot, breathless at its end.
Kim Preston threw down his racket. "You tireless Amazon!
No more games tonight." He tossed a ball to Alex.
"Let's go down to the Village and dance. It won't be too hot!"
She buttoned a skirt over her shorts.

Let's go somewhere where the music is loud, so loud you can't think. Let's stay late because these sleepless nights are driving me crazy. I hate to go home. I walk up and down that room like a lost soul, alive and not living.
She didn't say this, of course, to Kim.

Kim made it possible for her not to go to pieces. Kim, who didn't know that her heart bent brokenly. Kathleen's Kim breaking another heart.

Alex was with him as much as she could be. They danced, they mooted, they played tennis, golf and ping pong. She heard another girl laughing with him. It was another girl who kissed Kim.

And at the end of May she told Kim she would marry him and go to Mexico with him.

VIRGINIA CAR, OCCUPANTS SLIDE IN LAKE

The ice on Lake Simcoe was very dangerous for cars last week.

Earle Ruttle and Frank Arnold, local lumbermen, who wanted to inspect the timber on Thorah Island, motored across the lake
one day last week. They engaged Arthur Silbey, a guide from Georgina Island, who was accustomed to the lake, so that they would be directed safely to their destination.

Nearing Thorah Island, the ice became very shaky. Mr. Silbey advised the driver, Mr. Ruttle, to give the car the gas, which he did. Unfortunately, just when the speed got up they noticed open water. The guide yelled "Whoa, whoa, whoa!" but seeing it was too late he asked the driver once again to accelerate.

The car sank to the bottom of the lake, partly submerged, but owing to the great strength of Mr. Ruttle, the door was forced open and they climbed up on the ice. They then continued their journey by foot. Dry clothes were given them on the island.

The car was removed from the lake the next day by a wrecking crane from Beaverton and was taken to the garage there.

Messrs. Willard and Frank Arnold were engaged the latter part of last week in cutting ice.
Unfortunately, Frank had another dipping, this time slipping off a block of ice.

The funeral of the late Thomas
Burnie, who passed away in St.
Michael's hospital, Toronto, from cancer, was held in St. Anthony's church here Feb. 24.

Mr. Burnie spent all his life in Virginia with the exception of the past year, which he spent with his sister in Toronto, owing to his poor health. He leaves behind, his wife, three daughters and two sons.

Father Flanagan of Beaverton conducted the service. Pallbearers were Messrs. Joseph Carpenter, James Nolan, Moberly Mott,
Charles Laviolette, Ed. Cronsberry, and Willard Arnold. Sympathy is extended to the bereaved ones.

The community extends its deepest sympathy to Mrs. Tom Smithurst in the death of her
—in-law, Mrs. William Herbert Polley of Toronto. Mrs.
Polley died in Women's College hospital from pneumonia last week.

Mr. Harry Watson, who has been employed by Mr. Charles Laviolette for a number of years, has accepted a position with Mr. Charles Dodge. The Watson family will be moving this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Reg. Lynn and family visited Mr. and Mrs.
Frank Nolan on Sunday.

Mr. Kenneth Fairbairn of Bel-haven spent Friday with his brother, Milton.

Mr. Wesley Lyons was engaged working at P. P. O'Connor's estate at Roche's Point a few days last week.

Mrs. L. Chapelle of Sutton visited her relatives at the beach on Friday.
Howard Cronsberry, who has been very sick with pleurisy, and his sister Lorna, who had a relapse from the flu, are both getting better.

Mrs. Ann Boyd Came From Ireland Over 94
Years Ago

One of the oldest residents in the Lake Simcoe district, Mrs.
Boyd came to Canada from Ire-

narrow wagon trails running through it.

Mrs. Boyd married her husband, the late Richard Boyd, in Churchill. She went to school in a little log school-house where the early English school masters taught elementary education. She was a lifelong member of the Anglican church, and her husband was one of the first members of Christ church at Roche's Point. He died 37 years ago.

WHITCHURCH COUNCIL GIVES
FENCING BONUS

The township of Whitchurch has returned to the system of wire fence bonusing which they abandoned just at the beginning of the depression. Both Reeve C. E. Toole and Councillor Herman Kidd were members of the council at the time the bonus system was done away with, but when it was revived recently the resolution passed with little or no opposition.

Daniel Hall appeared before council at the regular meeting and said that he had hoped to be backed up by a goodly number of farmers to urge that the wire fence bonus be resumed. Mr. Hall claimed that where land is properly cleaned the wire fence was an aid to winter roads.

Councillor Kidd introduced the resolution to restore the bonus at 30c per rod, but the condition of payment will be more guarded than heretofore, when it was merely necessary to erect a wire fence and collect the bonus. It is provided by the new resolution: "That the council pay a bonus of 30 cents per rod for standard wire fencing erected in the township on any road where the council deems such a fence would be a benefit to the road. All applications for such bonus must be made to the council before the proposed fence is erected."

A request from the Bell Telephone Co. to have the township pass a bylaw regulating the placing, changing and removal of poles for their lines was rejected.

Certain features of the bylaw were objectionable to the council, and it was decided to have the Reeve and road superintendent act as a committee in connection with any of these matters arising between the municipality and the company.

After Feb. 15, relief in the township was administered through the constables. Constable Williamson has charge of the area from the 5th concession to Yonge St. and Constable Windsor from the 5th concession to the east townline.

They will each be paid $75 per year for their services, with no allowances for travelling expenses. Clerk John Crawford is required under the new arrangement to do the bookkeeping and will be paid $25 for his services.

It is believed that a closer check on relief can be evolved through the new arrangement, as it was found impossible for the clerk to do all the investigating in addition to his extensive other responsibilities in connection with the township.

It was reported that several outside dealers have been selling vehicles in the township without making out the necessary license costing $25 per annum. The council instructed the clerk to advise the constables that a strict check-up be made, that the same treatment may be meted out to all. "I think it is unfair that while some outside merchants pay this license fee, others are getting away with it," said Reeve Toole.

Relief for the month of January and which included a few hand-over accounts from December, totalled $489.37, a decided drop from a year ago, reported Clerk Crawford.

Council intends to make a drastic cut in the year's road program. While a year ago over $17,000 was expended on roads, the requisition was made out for 1937 at $13,000, and this figure will be forwarded to the road department as per their request for an estimate. If this expenditure can be followed there is likely to be a favorable drop in the tax rate.

The Bank of Montreal, Aurora branch, solicited the privilege of accepting taxes on behalf of the township as a convenience to the bank's customers.

Leonard Dion, Wilcox Lake, protested paying for garbage collection, he being a yearly tenant. He claimed he fed all his garbage and buried tin cans. Under the circumstances council thought the protest had some ground, and tabled the letter until later in the year when the bylaw comes up for 1937.

The general accounts paid were as follows: hospital for January, $91.75; postage and revenue, $15.50; registry office, $5.70; Hydro Electric, $4; telephone rental, $14.78; J. C. Bodfish, labor, $1.50; Bank of Toronto, collections, $14.40; hospitalization, $3.15; hospitalization, Woodstock, $45; Bank of Commerce, collecting, $12.80; Jno. Williamson, constable, $20; Mrs. Cherry, nursing, $37.50; P. Ash, wood, $10; L. J. Harper, trucking, $2; S. W. Hastings, coal, $14.84.

The following road accounts were paid: Div. 22, $6.50; div. 46, $10.90; div. 10, $13.65; div. 37, $3.05; div. 34, $4.40; div. 2, $7.20; div. 11, $27; div. 5, $11.10; div. 41, $7; div. 21, $1.75; div. 13, $3; div. 30, $8.80; div. 27, $5.51; div. 38, $20.25; div. 33, $4.10; T. L. S., $11.80; div. 6, $4.85; div. 32, $2.35; div. 1, $20.91; div. 28, $17.60; div. 19, $5.25; H. S. Widdfield, $49.

be done in many communities throughout the province," Mr. Magee said.

"There was approximately $68,000,000 spent in liquor in 1935 (the last year for which we have statistics), for which the consumer gets absolutely nothing in return," R. A. Whattam, supervisor of organization, Ontario Temperance Federation, declared, approaching the temperance question from the following angles, finance, human life, morality, liberty and religion.

"This sum of money used for relief would allow $1,000 to every family on relief in the province," he said. "The United States spent $278,000,000 to apprehend and bring to justice the murderer of the Lindbergh child. A large sum was spent for the rescue of the men trapped in the Moose River mine. Since the introduction of the beer saloon, motor fatalities have increased, on an average, three a week. This shows us the value the beer saloon puts on human life.

"At one time, when a man was elected to parliament he would be invited to express his opinions on a certain problem and then the ideas would be pooled," Mr. Whattam said in speaking of liberty. "The bills were drafted and brought before the assembly, but today it is different. When a member is elected the party whip tells him which way he must vote. Thus his liberty is lost."

Mr. Whattam stated that recently the Ontario prime minister brought in a bill that he had not even discussed with his cabinet.

"Legislation is one of the great mediums of reform," said Mr. Whattam. "How can we obtain efficiency in reform when the individual member has lost his liberty?"

In the oratorical contest, there were five contestants. In the senior class Mary Henry of Newmarket was first, winning the Dr. S. J. Boyd trophy for this year. This qualified her to compete in the provincial oratorical contest at the Ontario Temperance Federation convention to be held in Toronto March 4 and 5, today and tomorrow.

In the intermediate class Mabel Carr of Vancor won the W. P. Mabee trophy, and in the Junior class Jean Lundy won the trophy. The orations were all on subjects dealing with the subject of temperance.

The convention was well attended. Increased interest was indicated by a much larger attendance than last year. A hearty vote of appreciation was tendered J. M. Walton, retiring president, for the excellent services he has rendered the Federation during his term of office.

The ladies of Newmarket W. C. T. U. kindly served a tasty and generous lunch at the close of the convention.

THE SCOTCH OF IT

As McAndrew and his lass were entering the picture house, the girl said: "Here's my one and threepence, John."

"Ah, I'm glad you've given it me before we go in, Jenny, for I do hate to see a lassie pay for herself!"

BETHEL
SENDS MESSAGE
FROM MISSION

From the Bethel correspondent of The Era comes the following extract of a letter received from Rev. A. C. Huston, former pastor of the church, who is now at Wawabon, Nelson House, Manitoba.

"I hope you will not think that I have forsaken all my cherished memories of Bethel and its people—we often think of your neighborliness, when we were there, as the greatest moments were those when fellowship was rich beyond words to describe—and very little is ever achieved among any group of people unless they are willing to know the meaning of the word—as a real experience."

"The coming summer, if I am spared, I expect to aid in the erection of a new house on our mission and then accept the invitation to visit the Indians at the far north posts—as last summer my work was among the Chippewans and Eskimos."

This means, of course, that we will not be going home to Ontario this June. Not till June 1938. We are always busy, and now with the bright days ahead of us, we look forward with more enthusiasm to our work."

"When I look back to Bethel, I see proof that success or progress in the life of the church depends more on the people than on the minister. I trust the people there have not forgotten that and are giving their student minister today the same Christian sympathy they gave me—and both my helper and I in the work appreciate, for I was a stranger and they took me in—speaking of the first night I arrived in the neighborhood."

"Best wishes to all friends."

McKinley - Bryan

The marriage took place on Saturday afternoon at the home of the bride's mother, of Olive, second daughter of Mrs. Robt. Bryan and the late Mr. Bryan of West King, to Mr. Frank McKinley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. McKinley, in the presence of over 50 guests. Rev. F. V. Abbott performed the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Jas. Watson, was gown in wine velvet and carried white roses. She was attended by the groom's sister, Miss Edna McKinley, who wore powder blue chiffon and carried pink roses.

The groom was attended by the bride's brother, Mr. Clifford Bryan. Wedding music was played by Miss Marjorie Watson, Toronto, cousin of the bride.

Following the ceremony the guests sat down to a beautiful wedding supper. The bride's table was an "all white" one, while the other tables were done in pink with carnations and tulips as the floral decorations.

The Y. P. S. of Zephyr United church took the form of a social evening with a lantern lecture on "The oil fields of Canada."

Pictures showed the Turner Valley oil wells and the description was very interesting. The opening devotional exercises were in charge of Hugh Arnold.

Selections were given by a string quartet of local artists. Games were played, after which lunch was served.

"What shall I cry" was the text of the sermon at the United church last Sunday. This is the third of the Lenten topics. The words are the question asked by Isaiah and are found in the 40th chapter. These words were prophetic of John the Baptist and might well apply to our day.

"What message have we for the world today?" the pastor asked. "It must be a message from God and only as men listen to what is implied therein can it do its work."

"The message Isaiah received to proclaim was 'All flesh is grass, the grass withereth, the flower fadeeth, but the word of our God shall abide forever.'"

The withering grass and the Word of our God represent time and eternity, finite and infinite, the measurable and the immeasurable.

"This transient life is the only place where we can make ready for eternity and according to our readiness, so will our life be in this life, and that which is to come. The prophets had a message but we have a greater one. 'What shall I cry'—none could be greater than the gospel of God's redeeming love as it is revealed to us in Christ Jesus."

An appropriate solo was sung by Lee McLeod and was appreciated by the large congregation.
